ANN GORDON

TELL TALES

3 - 16 JUNE 2010

Graffiti is a form of expression used globally to tell the stories of the street. The inspiration for these latest works came from a recent journey to Amsterdam where Ann continues to explore the relationship between the natural world and the urban environment.

The walls and pavements of Amsterdam are a rich canvas for these layers of conversations happening between strangers. In this series Ann attempts to express the complexity of that environment, through the layering process of encaustic.

The birds in the paintings have almost human characteristics and express emotion, sometimes they hover in the abstract streetscape or are completely camouflaged, delving into the relationship between nature and the city, and ultimately ourselves.
